While serving the traditional two one-year terms as President of the largest Second Amendment membership organization in the U.S., the NRA, Keene led the "All-In" Campaign against electing gun-control advocates in 2012, worked tirelessly to keep the U.S. from adopting further gun control legislation in 2013, and grew the organization from four to five million plus members. He remains on the Board and Executive Council.

From 1982 to 2011, Keene was the elected Chairman of the American Conservative Union (ACU), the nation's oldest and largest grassroots conservative lobbying organization and the major organizer of the annual CPAC, the Conservative Political Action Conference. Under Keene's leadership, CPAC grew from a small issues conference of a few hundred attendees to a national platform of more than 11,000 conservative activists attendees in Washington, DC and more than 250,000 attendees online. Attendees see and hear the leaders of the conservative movement and to network with fellow conservatives from around the country and the world.

While holding these volunteer roles, Keene was Of Counsel to the Carmen Group, a Washington governmental affairs firm, and on the boards of the Constitution Project, the Montana Policy Institute, and The Center for the National Interest and a founding member of Right on Crime, a conservative criminal justice reform organization. In addition to advising local, state and national figures, he has been Southern Regional Political Director for Ronald Reagan's 1976 presidential campaign; National Political Director for George Bush's 1980 presidential race; Senior Advisor to former Senator Bob Dole in 1988 and advisor to Dole's presidential campaign in 1996; and an advisor to Mitt Romney's first Presidential bid.

A Special Assistant to Vice President Spiro Agnew in the Nixon White House, Keene then served as Executive Assistant to New York Senator Jim Buckley in charge of the landmark first Supreme Court fight on campaign finance reform. He has been a John F. Kennedy Fellow at Harvard University's Institute of Politics, a First Amendment Fellow at Vanderbilt University's Freedom Forum, and a member of the Board of Visitors at Duke University's Public Policy School. He was the National Chairman of Young Americans for Freedom as a student and graduated from the University of Wisconsin Law School.

Keene is recognized as one of the chief spokesmen for conservative principles and politics on television, radio, and in print and is widely quoted. For decades, he wrote a regular column for The Boston Globe then The Hill and authored articles in Human Events, National Review, and the American Spectator.
